INTRODUCTION

This document is part of the Global standards for quality health-care services for adolescents: a guide to implement a standards-driven approach to improve the quality of health-care services for adolescents. It is one of four volumes published separately, which include:

- Volume 1: Standards and criteria
- Volume 2: Implementation guide
- Volume 3: Tools to conduct quality and coverage measurement surveys to collect data about compliance with the global standards
- Volume 4: Scoring sheets for data analysis

This volume, Tools to conduct quality and coverage measurement surveys to collect data about compliance with the global standards, includes tools to determine whether the implementation of the standards has been achieved. These tools can be adapted for use in different contexts – be it self-assessments on a limited number of criteria, or external assessments (monitoring visits) by district managers, on a wider, or full range, of standards and criteria. The tools can be equally adapted to develop checklists for supportive supervision.

The toolkit included in this volume contains seven tools to collect data about quality of care (as measured by the criteria of the standards) and two tools to gather information about coverage.

The questions/items included in the tools are selected because they provide information about the criteria of the standards and whether or not facility-level actions in the implementation guide are taking place. Each of the criterion of the global standards can be measured in several ways. For example, one of the output criterion of Standard 4 states: Adolescents receive services in a friendly, supportive, respectful, non-discriminatory and non-judgemental manner. Whether or not this happens can be identified by directly asking the adolescent client, by asking the health-care provider, by directly observing a provider-client interaction with an adolescent, or by a combination of above. Although collecting data from adolescent clients is obviously a key source of information about the quality of care provided to them, it is important to realize that adolescents will not always be aware of all that is required to provide them with quality health services. In addition, the views of adolescent clients represent one type of perspective of how the services are delivered. For these reasons, it is important to use more sources of data collection. The proposed data collection tools enable quality assessment based on various perspectives (client, provider, support staff, manager, adult client, and the assessor in the case of direct observation) (see Table A2.1).

Coverage measurement surveys

Measuring the quality of services provided by the facility through exit interviews will not provide information on which proportion of the target population have access to, and use, services. If only gathering data through quality measurement surveys in the facilities, there is a risk that efforts will be limited to improving the quality of care for only a limited number of users, while a big proportion of community members may not report about their access to or use of services. From the public health perspective, a population-level impact can only be achieved if a sufficient proportion of the target population is using services that have a sufficient level of quality. This information can only be gathered by surveys in the community. The proposed tools, therefore, include interview tools for adult and adolescent community members. In addition, community surveys provide essential information regarding the implementation of Standard 1: The health facility implements systems to ensure that adolescents are knowledgeable about their own health, and they know where and when to obtain health services, and Standard 2: The health facility implements systems to ensure that parents, guardians and other community members and community organizations recognize the value of providing health services to adolescents and support such provision and the utilization of services by adolescents. These two standards cannot be measured by facility-based surveys alone.

Table 1 provides an overview of the various questions in the data collection tools that relate to each of the standards and their criteria.

National adaptation of tools

The proposed tools are constructed to measure the global standards. If changes were made in the process of the national adaptation of the global standards, the tools will need to be adapted as well to make sure they are actually measuring the national standards. Below are some considerations in the process of adaptation of the tools.

If only minor changes were made in the process of national adaptation of the global standards (e.g. in the title of the cadre/personnel)

- Use the included tools as a basis, and adjust/adapt as necessary.

If new standards, or new criteria within the standards, were added in the process of national adaptation of the global standards

- Decide which data collection methods are best suited to assess the new criteria (e.g. adolescent client exit interview? observation? provider interview?). Make sure you collect data from at least two sources for each new criterion.
- Translate each new criterion into questions for the respective tools, and add these new questions in the corresponding questionnaires.
- Review the questionnaires for internal consistency, good flow of the questions, and to eliminate redundancies.

If standard(s), or criteria within the standards, were eliminated in the process of national adaptation of the global standards

- Identify the questions in the tools that correspond to the eliminated standards or criteria.
- Review the changed questionnaires for internal consistency and good flow of the questions.

Summarizing data in aggregate scores

An efficient way to summarize all the data that has been collected is to calculate an overall score for each standard that was assessed. Scoring is based on a point system in which low points, “0”, are assigned to answers/items indicating lower quality performance and high points, “1”, are assigned to answers/items indicating stronger or higher quality performance. To moderate the relative value of the observation vis-a-vis other data sources, in three instances a “weighted” score was applied (see Box 1). A score per standard is presented as a percentage of the maximum possible score, and is calculated by quantifying the information collected on the standard from each data source then averaging all of the scores from each data source (see Volume 4: Scoring sheets for data analysis).

Countries may set thresholds to judge the level of implementation of standards, for example:

Score 10% or less	■ Not meeting standards
Score 10%–40%	■ Needs major improvement
Score 40%–80%	■ Needs some improvement
Score 80% or more	■ Meets standards

Box 1. Weighting the relative importance of observation vis-a-vis other verification means

Depending on the criterion, the importance of direct observation vis-a-vis other verification means may vary. For example, the best way to measure Criterion 27, “Providers’ obligations and adolescents’ rights are clearly displayed in the health facility,” is to observe if the rights are clearly displayed. However, if the usual score of “1” is applied for an observed display of rights, then the results would be dominated by the other data sources used to measure this criterion. Therefore, a multiplier $\times 2$ is applied to give more weight to the observation as a measurement method. Conversely, Criterion 43, “Medicines and supplies are in adequate quantities without shortages (stock-outs), and are equitably used” and Criterion 44, “The equipment necessary to provide the required package of services to adolescents is available, functioning and equitably used” would usually be given a usual score of “1” if medicines or equipment are present. If measured this way, the results would be dominated by the observation (availability of the medicine or equipment) and would leave little space to detect inequitable use, which is measured by the other data sources. Therefore, a multiplier of $\times 0.75$ is applied to reflect in a more balanced manner both the “availability” and “equitable use” of medicines and equipment in the final score. In the majority of cases, the score from the direct observation constitutes approximately 50% of the total score. While in general this may be adequate, countries may decide during the process of adaptation if, and which, criterion should have weighted scores applied.

INTRODUCTION AND CONSENT

Consent form for parent(s)/guardian(s) accompanying adolescents less than 18 years of age

Hello,

My name is and I work for the . We are conducting an assessment of the quality of care provided to adolescents in this facility on behalf of .

I am interested in your son's/daughter's/ward's opinions, and I would like to talk to him/her about his/her experience using this health facility. For this I would like to ask him/her a few questions. This information will help to improve health services for adolescents. This interview will take about 20–25 minutes. I will not write down his/her name, and all the information he/she provides will be kept strictly confidential and not be shared with anyone else.

His/her participation in this survey totally depends on you and him/her. If you wish you may refuse to give us permission to interview your son/daughter/ward. If you decide your son/daughter/ward should not participate, it will not affect his/her access to services at this health facility in any way.

Do you have any questions?

May we begin?

Notes for adaptation:

- ¹ Adjust the list according to national lists.
- ² The minimum level of stock depends on several factors, such as average monthly consumption, procurement period and supplier lead time. The facility manager and the pharmacist should know what are the minimum levels for each item in their facility; otherwise, a proxy value of medicines necessary for at least 10 clients could be used.
- ³ The specific vaccines should be listed during the national adaptation of the tool, depending on the immunization schedule for adolescents, and the policies regarding the necessary stocks in primary care facilities.
